TippingPoint, a leader in intrusion prevention, has announced that Daniel Lee has joined the organization as Asia Pacific Sales Director to drive growth plans and manage channel operations.

Daniel joins TippingPoint from Check Point Software Technologies and brings over 17 years of IT and security sales experience. His lengthy tenure and various roles with Nokia in China, North Asia and Asia Pacific management roles position him well to take TippingPoint to the next level across all markets.

“Daniel brings just the right mix of channel management and direct touch sales experience to really drive our business in Asia,” said Paul Couturier, vice president and general manager of TippingPoint EMEA and APAC. “His extensive experience in penetrating new markets and building successful businesses will be invaluable as TippingPoint continues to launch innovative network security offerings; add to that his deep knowledge of China and North Asia and this is a strategic hire that positions us for real growth.”

“I am honored to be joining TippingPoint at such an exciting time,” said Daniel. “With new partnerships and product lines being announced to protect networks against the increasingly dangerous threat landscape, I look forward to working with new and existing customers and getting into the field across Asia Pacific to develop the capability of our channel partners to address emerging threats.”
